DOOR COUNTY CHERRIES

- You can typically expect to see cherry blossoms during the middle to the end of May. The crop usually ripens mid-July through the end of July. These are both weather-driven events and will vary each year.
- Door County is the 4th largest cherry producing region in the nation. The top three producing regions are Michigan, New York, and Utah.
- All but 100 acres of Wisconsin's red cherry crop is grown in Door County.
- Door County has approx. 2500 acres of Montmorency (tart) cherry orchards. The sweet cherry crop consists of only 50 acres, just enough to supply local roadside markets.
- Cherries have been grown in Door County since the late 1800's. The moderating effects of the surrounding waters make the county's climate ideal for cherries.
